Overview of the Kitakyushu Forum on Asian Women (KFAW)

Establishment Prospectus

In the international community today, efforts are under way on a global scale to realize world peace and enhance the well-being of humankind.

To advance the status of women as well, global-scale activities were vigorously carried out during the United Nations Decade for Women following the International Women's Year in 1975, toward the goals of "equality, development and peace," based on the idea that a nation's overall development and world welfare and peace require social participation by both men and women in all areas. Today, however, many problems remain to be solved in advancing the actual status of women. Therefore, the spirit of the United Nations Decade for Women has been carried forward, and all over the world efforts are under way in line with the "Nairobi Forward-looking Strategies for the Advancement of Women," adopted with the target year 2000 at the Nairobi Conference.

Women's issues involve various disadvantages and inequalities that befall women simply because of their gender. Women's issues, therefore, concern basic human rights and human dignity. In this sense, women's issues affect not only women, but society as a whole, including men. Women's issues are universal. From this perspective, we now recognize the need to reform today's society in which women's views have rarely been reflected and build a society with the joint participation by both sexes. In developing countries, the promotion of both national development and women's participation in such development have become issues of great importance.

In recognition of the significance of women's issues, and based on various activities carried out since the International Women's Year, the Kitakyushu Forum on Asian Women began its activities with Kitakyushu City's "Hometown Creation Project." Since then, the Forum has been conducting research into, and collecting and disseminating information on, women's issues in Japan and the rest of Asia, providing training for human resource development in developing countries and organizing international exchange programs to promote mutual understanding, thereby assuming a central role in advancing the status of women and promoting solidarity and development in the Asian region.

As interdependency in the international community gains in strength, and Japan's role therein becomes increasingly important, we must deepen our awareness of the mission and significance of the Kitakyushu Forum on Asian Women as a foundation to secure a stable financial base, further improve activities, further clarify the meaning of women's issues in Japanese society, contribute to the advancement of the status of women in Asia, and achieve the goals of the International Women's Year: "Equality, Development and Peace" (quoted from the KFAW charter which was drawn up in 1993).

[1] In 1989, a national project, Furusato-sosei (Hometown Revitalization Project), was implemented in all municipalities. For this project, the City of Kitakyushu committed JPY 100 million to establish KFAW.
